THE TREASURY OF CLYTEMNESTRA.—In excavating the treasure house of Clytemnestra, (so-called,) near the Acropolis of Mycenae, many figures of Juno were found. Some have extended hands, others have them clasped on the breast. Also some female figures, with heads uncovered, much compressed in shape, with large eyes and outstretched hands. On each side of the breasts horns protrude, and, uniting, form a circle. Also male figures, with uncovered heads, ornamented by a diadem with a star. The figures have large Asiatic noses, large eyes and Assyrian beards. Many figures of Juno, in form like a cow, are also found, decorated with paintings in red and blue. All these were found in a trench in front of treasure houses. In the Acropolis figures of Juno were found in such abundance that more than 700 have been collected. The centre of whose bodies form quarts and represent the full moon.
As Juno was at first the crescent moon, the horns of the cow represent the crescent moon.
There are also figures with uncovered heads, bird shaped. Others with heads much compressed, and having on them a kind of flat dish or plate on which a cross is sometimes placed. Figures of females with cows' heads are frequently met with, but these until the present time (November 21) have been seen only on handles of vases. Curiously enough these pictures of figures with cows' heads were found in Troy on vase handles only. We have also a bone button, with this gold covering, in the middle of which is graven a circle, with a triangle made by three long, broad knives, their handles composed of beautiful spiral lines.
That gold and silver were in use is proved by the fact that a piece of porphyry has been found on both sides of which are cut fifteen different patterns of ornaments, such as earrings, brooches, &c., which ornaments, there is no doubt, were always made of gold or silver.
There have also been found, at a depth of about five metres, numerous copper articles, among them five large knives, two small wheels, two lances, two battle-axes, a pair of tongs, two vases and pieces of four others.
Also many pieces of agate, with pictures of animals delicately engraved on them; they have holes through them, and were probably used for necklaces. Most wonderful are the varieties of the paintings on the vases. The greater part of them are painted inside and outside, the inside paintings being usually much the finer.

HORRIBLE DEATH—KILLED BY A DOG.—
About two weeks ago a negro preacher named Riley, residing in Martin county, near Hill's Ferry, left his home together with his wife, to attend church, leaving his two children, a boy of five years of age and a girl a year younger, in the house with no other companion than a large dog, belonging to the boy. During their absence the girl had occasion to crawl under the building in search of something she had left there, when the dog, which was lying under the house at the time, made a violent attack upon her, biting and severely injuring her in several places. The boy, who was up stairs, hearing the cries of his sister, ran to her assistance, when the animal turned upon him, seized him by the throat, and after a severe struggle succeeded in killing him. When the parents of the children returned they found the dog lying by the side of his dead master engaged in eating the flesh from the child's head and face, and when they attempted to drive him away he was so savage that they were obliged to shoot him. We understand that the dog had always in the past been particularly fond of the boy, and his behavior is unaccountable. —Norfolk Virginian.

MOTHER EARTH AS A DOCTOR.—Some very extraordinary properties have been discovered in the earth of New Jersey. It seems to be an infallible cure for chronic diseases, for rheumatism, wounds, bruises and corrupting sores.
The application is very simple. The earth is bound on to the limb and changed once a day.
Some very extraordinary cures have been performed, and people carry off quantities of the earth and apply it at home. It can be found, not only by the acre, but by the mile. It is as good for animals as it is for men. A farmer had a hog that was fearfully lacerated. In inflammation set in and the hog was turned out to die. He crawled to the hollow filled with wash. He laid himself down and continued to wallow. In three days the inflammation was gone. The animal began to eat, and in less than a week was perfectly cured. Whether the medical properties are chemical or mineral no one can tell as yet. The farm on which this remarkable earth is found is owned by a New York merchant. His friends already distinguish him as the "mud doctor." —Burleigh in the Boston Journal.

The carrier boys of the Titusville Herald appreciate their patrons. "Oh! he's a bully fella; he gave me a dollar for my New Year's address," said one to his confederate. "Good enough," was the reply; "but ain't she nice, though, that lady who gave me a dollar and said she often thought of me on these cold mornings." Now how like a woman was the kind expression of that lady! We'll venture she is one of the best-lod wives in the land, and makes her home happy for all.
